I FROM THE ARMY EDITION.] Large Fire.

At an early hour Friday morning, fire broke out in the three story brick building north side of Broad street, near Church, owned by and adisining the large grossry store of Mezera. Künck, Wiekenburg & Co. The premises, with the exception of the second story, were formerly complete by Mr. A. J. Burke, as a prining establishment. The second story was used by J. B. Campbell and J. Nathan, Engine and You gibbst where the struggling patriot hangs, law offices. The fire semmanicated to the adjoining building on the east, the lower stery formerly kept by B. Ford as a boot and shee store, and the upper stories as law effices by ideasts Brown & Perier, and others. The sta-mises were owned by Dr. Jus. S. Inigesby. These two buildings were entirely consumed. During the progress of this fire another was discovered at the rentawest corner of church street and St. Michael's siley, which destroyed a range of four very old buildings, besides the Gian lecton Cotton pross, the hitchen and outshowen on Church street; also the building orcopied by the German Turner's association as a ball, situated in the roar, between Church and Mostlug streets, balenging to Mr. J. bile Advertiser and Register tells the following

I heard, yesterday, a good anecdate, illustrawas thrown over an embankment, at the bottom of which was a ground (or goobar) per patch. which had just been plowed up, leaving the peas expessed. The soldiers crawled out of the ears on all-fours, and, without over looking sching them, crawled into the patch and filled heir posters and stemache with goalers before of the battle-field, it asver occurred to them that they could be hurt on the cars, and fertunately. one of them were. The corn being arowd-id, they art on the glatform, and when the train can over the Lack, hold of them were pitched bradforement against a small sharpy which Mr. Burgwin had built close to the track, for the stvenience of his family wills waiting rain to arrive. Such was the violence of the shock, and such the density of the African shull, that this chanty was literally shottered, and the frequents thrown ever the ground. The boy jumped up, rubbed his abins, and began to bottem, not frem pain, but from fright. The eld woman, however, rose and rebuised him sternly: "Quit dat ervin', Jeems Menry, and pick up den dar cake." My informant declares this oc-

"Battle's magnificently stern array." It was a sight aplendd and impressive to behold, but it had not attractions enough, then, to tempt me to walk two hundred yards to see it. I had been en my feet centionally for thirty hours, slept not a moment, and had walked about thirty miles over most exectable roads. I realisted the expressive words of Gen. Floyd in reporting the battle of Fort Denelson—"there is, though some are mostle to comprehend it, such a thing as physical exhaustion; there is a limit te hu man codurance." The camenade served but as a lullaby to wee me to sleep, and there I sleet an a lullaby to woo me to stoop, and there I sloot until cur part in the battle's drama had come. About four o'cleek Stewart's division mayed on to the right. We had not preceded far, when Clayton's brigade was detached, faced about, and moved to our extreme left, near Ressville. I do not remember, indeed I never knew, the order in which the regiments were disposed in the brigade. But as that time, the 38th was ex the extreme right.

wa ware marshing just below the summit of the ridge, on the east sile, miving by the left flank, when, to our great surprise, the Yankees opened fire on our roar, showing that they had already flanked us. A movement was then made, which would have greatly surprised Hardee, for it is not in his tactics. It was cartainly a novel would have greatly surprised Hardes, for it is not in his incides. It was certainly a novel in his incides. It was certainly a novel in and shelter us from their fire.

I teek the western side of the ridge, to come all not in his incides. It was certainly a novel in and shelter us from their fire.

I theped and helieved that some other brigade would make a stand, if only for five minutes, but we managed, in some incomprehensible way, to change front, and form a line facing the enemy. It may be remarked that a movement by the flank, near the enemy, unless it is known procisely where he is, is agreet blunder. To be near him, and not know it, is a great blunder. To be near him, and not know it, is a greater b'under at him, and not know it, is a greater b'under still. We should have been in "deuble column at his flesses," for thus a line can be easily at the flesses, and we had goed fires made for us, and obtained for us, it is known that we wend some other brigade wor in vain. But they were not it with spirit. But the others, had goed fires made for us, and shelter us from their fire.
